

Pursuant the 47 CFR 2.925(d), the label shall be permanently affixed to the equipment and shall be readily visible to the purchaser at the time of purchase. The required information may be permanently marked on a nameplate of metal, plastic, or other material fastened to the equipment enclosure by welding, riveting, etc., or with a permanent adhesive. Such a label must be able to last the expected lifetime of the equipment in the environment in which the equipment will be operated and must not be readily detachable.

The label is fastened to the equipment's permanently attached part with permanent adhesive, and it can last the expected lifetime of the equipment in the environment in which the equipment will be operated and not be readily detachable manually unless the users intentionally wreck the label by tools.
