Re: Confirmation Number TC750164, Correspondence Numbers 22581, 22582, 22718 and 22719, with FCC ID: AZ489FT5844.

Dear Mr. Clavier;

Motorola Inc., 8000 West Sunrise Boulevard, Fort Lauderdale, Florida, herein submits its responses to the 23 and 26th August 2005 requests for information in Correspondence 22581, 22582, 22718 and 22719.

RE: 22581, 22582, 22718 and 22719

Q1) For TCB Please update this filing to be consistent with previous HAC filings of a similar nature.

Q2) Please provide some description of the differences between the 4 models.xhibit named "FT5844 EX06b.2 (Occ BW).pdf" contains test data for exhibit b.3.

Response for Correspondence 22581, 22582, 22718 and 22719:

Per Motorola discussions with the FCC on Monday, 29th August 2005, and as requested by Bruce Franca of the FCC, Motorola has retested all the models exactly as specified in C63.19-2005 Annex C.3.1, rd. 3.4 and the Office of Engineering. A new report is provided accordingly for each model. The results for all the re-tested models achieve the same M rating (M3 or better).

RE: 22718

Q1) Please update the filing to address all issues raised in previous TIMCO HAC filings. Please assure that all TCB guidance is implemented during review.

Q2) Please justify use of burst average in the probe modulation factor development with current TCB procedures. Please retest as necessary.

Response for Correspondence 22718:

Model i850 is a deluxe camera-phone model with a large interior TFT display. Model i760 differs from the i850 in that it lacks the camera and has a different finish. Model i560 is a variation of the i760 that has a smaller interior display which is a CSTN type rather than TFT, and a housing ruggedized for outdoor enthusiasts. The above models and additional details are available via the Internet at <http://idenphones.motorola.com/idenProducts/phonesHome.do?phones=1>.

The i450 model number is a non-ruggedized housing version of the i560 which will be sold under the Boost label for prepaid phone users. It is not yet listed at the cited Internet site.

Contact me at (954) 723-5793 if you require any additional information.
