The stock car racing legend began with an inaugural roar when the first Southern 500 hit the Darlington Raceway® in Darlington, South Carolina in the fall of 1950. Widely regarded as the toughest track in motor sports, DARLINGTON® offers a unique egg-shaped oval challenge to drivers, which has earned it the affectionate nickname, "Too Tough To Tame," among drivers and fans alike. Those who have raced DARLINGTON® feel a special pride in conquering this ferocious, most competitive track, and for having entered the mystique of stock car racing's rich history that began here over fifty years ago.
