November 18, 1999

Gentlemen:

The operation manual for the Home Wireless Networks Wireless Ethernet Access Point FCC ID: NSK0016A is being written at this time and is not available for inclusion in the report. We understand that we must include the required FCC statements as part of the manual. That page, as it will appear in the manual follows this letter.

Sincerely,

Interference information

Some telephone equipment generates, uses, and can radiate radio frequency energy, and if not installed and used properly, may cause interference to radio or TV reception. This equipment has been tested and found to comply with the limits for a Class B digital device, pursuant to Part 15 of the FCC Rules.

These limits are designed to provide reasonable protection against harmful interference in a residential installation. This equipment generates, uses, and can radiate radio frequency energy, and if not installed and used in accordance with the instructions, may cause harmful interference to radio communications. However, there is no guarantee that interference will not occur in a particular installation. If this equipment does cause harmful interference to radio or television reception, which can be determined by turning the equipment off and on, the user is encouraged to try to correct the interference by one or more of the following measures.

- Reorient or relocate the receiving antenna.
- Increase the separation between the equipment and receiver.
- Connect the equipment to an outlet on a circuit different from that to which the receiver is connected.
- Consult the dealer or an experienced radio/TV technician for help.

This device complies with Part 15 of the FCC Rules. Operation is subject to the following two conditions:

1. This device may not cause harmful interference.
2. This device must accept any interference received, including interference that may cause undesired operation.

Note: Privacy of communications may not be ensured when using this phone.
