Dear Laura,

You can request for short-term confidentiality for Internal Photos, and request long term confidentiality for Schematics. In order to do that, please revise your confidentiality letter based on the attached example.

Please note that Short term confidentiality will extend for 45 days from the date of the Grant of Equipment Authorization, and, absent any other action, the subject exhibits will be automatically placed on the public database at the end of this period. However, if prior to the expiration of the 45 day period, an applicant engages in public marketing activities or otherwise publicizes a device for which temporary confidential treatment has been granted, the applicant must coincidentally notify the FCC or the TCB issuing the equipment authorization so that the subject exhibits may be placed in the public database immediately. If an applicant requires more than the original grant of confidentiality of 45 days, the applicant can request an extension of the limited confidentiality for an additional 45 days. To do so, the applicant must notify the FCC, or the TCB that issued the grant, a minimum of 7 calendar days prior to the expiration of the original 45 day grant of confidentiality.

Since there will be additional effort for TCB to manage short-term confidentiality, please check with applicant to write down a reasonable expiry date.

Thank you,
Helen

Good morning, Helen:

Thank you for the quick response.

Although the technology our client uses is not new, the way in which the board is constructed is new and is considered by our client to be a trade secret. As such, they are only asking for temporary confidentiality; just long enough to launch the product before the competition has the opportunity to copy the design. Would it be possible to obtain short term confidentiality on these internal photos (say, 3-6 months)?

Thank you in advance.

Laura Bramschreiber, VP Operations, Pulver Laboratories Inc.

Question #1: Based upon FCC 0.457 (d)(2), only when new technology is involved, photos of internal component layout can be requested confidential treatment. For this type of device, internal photos are not allowed to be kept confidential. Please revise the confidentiality Letter.

Best regards,
Helen Zhao
